

This seems to be one more assault on the disabled by an insensitive administration. Dump the idea. You should be working to making communicatioin easier for the deaf, not harder.

Charge the market price to the groups that buy the communication rights from the American taxpayers. Stop giving the rights away so that companies can get them dirt-cheap and then turn around and sell them at high profits. Cut out the missile-men and let the American taxpayers get the profits. Then you won't have to cut services for the deaf and disabled.
